

California Health Plans are helping to Build the Bridge to Affordable, Accessible, and Universal Health Care Coverage

At every critical step towards achieving universal health coverage in the Golden State, California's health plans, along with the Governor and state legislature, have played an integral role in building the bridge to get California to universal health care coverage. Health plans' consistent advocacy for, implementation of, and education to Californians on pivotal policies has led to more people than ever being covered — protecting Californians from rising health care and pharmaceutical costs — and to California being closer than ever to achieving universal health coverage.
